City, Maryland Inst., Baltimore; Johns Hopkins Univ. (physical sciences, etc.); m. Baltimore, Md., April 21, 1895, Helen, d. Lewis H. and Rebecca Hirshberg; one daughter, Estelle, b. March 5, 1896. Removed with parents to U. S. in 1865; began in 1876 as telegraph operator of the Gold and Stock and the Western Union Telegraph Cos.; removed to N. Y. City, 1880 and became identified with development of electric light industry in employ of the Edison Co., the U. S. Elec. Illuminating Co., Fuller Mf'g Co., etc.; returned to Baltimore, 1884, to devote attention to developing his inventions in electric signalling, railroading, controlling apparatus and illumination, organizing companies to push these inventions; among these being his well-known regulating socket, which was the first practicable device for "turning down" or controlling the light or candle-power of incandescent electric lamps without the use of wasteful resistance, thereby placing the incandescent lamp on a par with gas. Also inventor and patentee of the modern alternating current of "converter" electric railway system, by which the limitations and restrictions of the 500-volt trolley systems were for the first time successfully overcome. The underlying principle of electric generation, transmission, conversion and distribution disclosed in these patents made possible the various rapid-transit subways and tunnels now operating in N. Y. City, and the electrification of suburban and long-distance steam railways now going on in the U. S. and other countries. His basic patents on this invention were finally adjudged in his favor after nearly 14 years litigation, and were purchased by the Westinghouse Elec. and Mf'g Co. in 1903. Has taken out over 150 patents on various pioneer inventions; many of which are in extensive use, some of the more notable being his method of electrically welding track-rails, new processes of rivetting by electricity, underground electric railway conduit or sub-trolley system now used in New York and other large cities, methods and appliances for electric heating and cooking, telephone and telephonograph systems and apparatus, etc., among others in general use are his basic patents of Feb. 1, 1887 (lately expired) on electric elevator controllers, etc., covering the method and apparatus adopted by the Atis Elevator Co. and others on their electric elevators, and for general motor-starting and braking purposes. Pres. and gen. mg'r The United States Automatic Telephone Co. Independent in politics. Hebrew religion. Mem. Am. Inst. Elec. Eng'rs, A. A. A. S., Am. Electrochem. Soc., N. Y. Elec. Soc., Am. Elected 1881 and reëlected 1882 and 1883 mem. N. Y. Assembly; in session of 1883 (in which the Democrats had a majority) was a candidate for the speakership; and in session of 1884 was chm'n Com. on Cities, and of the special committee which investigated abuses in the conduct of the government of N. Y. City. In 1884 was delegate to N. Y. State Republican Convention, and later in same year delegate at large, and chm'n of N. Y. delegation to the Nat. Republican Convention at Chicago; supported Senator Edmunds for the presidential nomination, but when Blaine was nominated, entered actively into the campaign in his behalf. Bought a ranch in North Dakota and lived on it for two years studying the Far West and its people thoroughly and becoming an adept as ranchman and hunter. Returned to N. Y. City, 1886, and was made Republican nominee for mayor, but was defeated by Abram S. Hewitt; appt'd mem. U. S. Civil Service Comm'n, 1889, and served as its pres., but resigned that office in 1895 to accept the presidency of the Police Comm'n under the administration of Mayor Strong, which office held until April 6, 1897, when was appt'd by President McKinley, ass't sec. of the Navy. When war with Spain was declared he resigned his position in the Navy Dep't and with Dr. Leonard Wood, an army surgeon, organized the First Reg't U. S. Volunteer Cavalry, recruited from the ranches of the West and popularly known as the Rough Riders, Surgeon Wood, because of his superior tactical knowledge, becoming colonel and Mr. Roosevelt lieut.-col.; reg't went to the front, to Cuba, and participated in the fighting in front of Santiago de Cuba, and was promoted to colonelcy of the reg't for gallantry at Las Guasimas; at close of the war returned with reg't to Montauk Point, where was mustered out of service; shortly afterward was nominated for and Nov. 1898, was elected governor of New York; in 1900 was nominated for Vice-President of the United States by the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia, and elected, and entered on the duties of that office, March 4, 1901; on the death of President McKinley, Sept. 14, 1901, was sworn in as President; in the National Convention, 1904, was nominated for President, and in the November election was elected by a plurality in the popular vote of 2,512,417 and a majority of 1,696,142, for the term beginning Mar. 4, 1904, and expiring March 4, 1909. His administration has been marked by the inauguration of great works of public improvement, notably the Panama Canal; by measures for the orderly government and advancement of the people of our insular possessions, by the prosecution of faithless officials, the curbing of law-breaking corporations, the making of laws for proper inspection of the packing and meat-dressing industries, the prevention of frauds and impurities in food products, the conservation of our natural resources, and other salutory measures inaugurated in response to the President's initiative. In foreign policy Mr. Roosevelt has taken the part of a peacemaker, and through his initiative Russia and Japan, by the treaty of Portsmouth were brought to the conclusion of an honorable peace, in recognition of which the B'd of Directors of the Nobel Institute of Stockholm conferred upon him, in 1906, the Nobel Peace Prize. Although for twenty-five years past almost continuously occupied with the public service he has earned distinction also in the profession of letters. Author: History of the Naval War of 1812, 1882; Hunting Trips of a

City and has been identified with many of the most important litigations in N. Y. City; was leading counsel for the estate in the celebrated contest growing out of the will of the late A. T. Stewart, through the schemes of alleged Irish heirs; counsel in the Broadway surface railroad litigation, the Sugar Trust contest, the Aqueduct litigation; successively defended Robert Ray Hamilton in the suit brought about through the machinations of the notorious Emma Mann, and in many other cases of equal prominence with these. Appt'd by President Arthur, 1883, U. S. Dist. Att'y of Southern Dist. of N. Y., and served until 1885, and during term, among other cases, convicted Joseph D. Fish of criminal complicity in connection with the celebrated Grant-Ward frauds; delegate-at-large to Constitutional Convention of State of N. Y., in which was chm'n Judiciary Com. and leader on the floor of the Republican majority in that Convention. A year after the close of the Spanish-Am. War, when an especially strong man was needed in the War Dep't to straighten out conditions resulting from the prematurely begun, but quickly won campaign in two hemispheres and to meet the unprecedented demand which came with the sudden acquisition of our insular possessions, he was appointed, August 1, 1899, as secretary of War, and as such placed an army of 70,000 men in the Philippines which quelled the formidable insurrection under Aguinaldo and the minor uprisings which followed, and also took up the burden of the Chinese Expedition to rescue our minister and his household during the Boxer uprising, his service in the War Dep't continuing under reappointment by President Roosevelt, until Feb. 1, 1904, when he resigned to return to the practice of law. On July 1, 1905, he was induced by President Roosevelt to return to the Cabinet as secretary of State in succession of the late John Hay, in which position, has dealt with many important questions bearing upon our relations in the Orient, the Russo-Japanese War and its termination, the situation in Cuba, etc., and in 1906 made a diplomatic tour of South America, which has done much to strengthen our relations with the Latin-American republics. Was mem. Alaskan Boundary Tribunal, which sat in London, Sept.-Oct., 1903, and settled the disputed questions of the boundary between Alaska and Canada. SWORDS, Edward Jenner:
Railroad official; b. N. Y. City, Jan., 1842; s. Edward Jenner and Jamima (Striker) Swords; ed. in N. Y. City; m. 1st, N. Y. City, 1872, Julia J. Marvin; 2d Nov., 1890, Nellie Irving; children: Edward J., William V., Walter Marvin (deceased). Officer in U. S. Navy; volunteer service; made cruise around the world. While serving as eng'r, U. S. N., during bombardment of Fort Fisher, Dec. 24, 1864, the ship to which he was attached was struck with a 10-inch Columbia, considerably below the water-line; noticing that no effort was being made by the deck officers to plug the hole, he and another eng'r proposed to the comd'g officer that they would do it, and at their request the starboard battery was run over to the port side so as to list the ship and bring the hole as near as possible to the surface and to the boat's crew. Personally plugged the hole, although the plugs on board were made for the guns of Revolutionary times and were only 6 inches in diameter, therefore had to wrap a blanket around in order to fit the hole as he drove the plug in with a sledge; all this time the shots from the fort were striking all around the party, and the ship was rapidly sinking; one boiler had been perforated by the shot, but there was steam enough in the boiler to run a donkey engine, and keep the pumps at work until the ship was soon after relieved from the water, and went into action the next day. UNTERMYER, Samuel:

Lawyer; b. Lynchburg, Va., March 6, 1858; s. Isadore and Therese Untermyer; ed. in public schools of N. Y. City, Coll. City of N. Y., Columbia Law School. Admitted to bar of N. Y. in 1879, and since then in active practice of law in N. Y. City and in the Federal Courts; now senior mem. firm of Untermyer, Guggenheimer & Marshall. Before he was 24 years of age he represented practically all the important brewing interests in the city of N. Y., and was counsel for the local, State and U. S. Brewers' Ass'ns. He has been identified with many celebrated cases; defended Asa Bird Gardner against the attempt to remove him from office as district attorney of N. Y. County; represented the Wertheimers, English art dealers, in their controversy against the Count and Countess de Castellane, and was instrumental in securing to the creditors of the Castellane Estate the payment in full of their claims, amounting to 20,000,000 francs; represented Charles W. Morse in the Dodge-Morse controversy, and has been counsel in many other celebrated cases. He has been prominently engaged in the organization and reorganization of industrial, mining and railroad corporations; is general counsel for the Kansas City Southern R'y and for the Receivers of the Seaboard Air Line R'y; represents the English Debenture-Holders' and Shareholders' Com. of the Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills Co., in connection with the recent receivership and proposed reorganization. While one of the earliest to become active in the organization of industrial combinations, he has been one of the most vigorous opponents of corporate abuses. His exposure of the proposed financial plan of reorganization of the U. S. Shipbuilding Co. led to the substitution of a more conservative one which saved hundreds of thousands of dollars to the investors; and his exposure of the great life insurance companies' corruption funds paid to campaign managers and in connection with legislation, led to the subsequent investigations, to the removal of the officers who had been principally responsible for the irregularities, and to the passage of laws in many States making it a criminal offense for a life insurance company to contribute to a political campaign or to influence legislation; and he has been at the head of several Policy-holders' Committees. Director Am. Lithographic Co., United Fruit Co., Internat. Steam Pump Co., General Development Co. Mem. N. Y. County Lawyers' Ass'n, League for Political Education.
